

Adjective Out of Order

(AOoO)

Issues :-/

The defenseman, dumbly, put the puck on the other team's stick right in the middle of our zone.

Jack's, sad and alone, pet cat died.

The house, every floorboard creaked as if ghosts were walking through the halls,
was old.

My mom was so happy,
because she got a deal at the store.

The turtle, slow and careless,
was swimming in the pond.

The Jet skis, shooting water
out the back and shiny
bright colors, were fast.

Jackson, clever to find the teacher's copy of the test and bold to use them, showed all of his friends the answers.

Johnny Rose, disgusted from Rolands Behavior and amazed by the stars, sat in disbelief.

David Rose, excited for his job and rushing to get out of the house, hopped out of bed.

The cat, swiftly and recklessly, ran through the house.

Nick, quickly and frantically,
left for work.

I arrived at the 188 trading post, a small training town with many customers.

Sally, following her friends
in fear, jumped into the pond.

The kid, defeated after a huge beating, was sick.