

Week of April 22nd

Monday, 4/22/24

1. Today in class we everyone read two short stories - "The Flying Machine" by Ray Bradbury and "Robot Dreams" by Isaac Asimov, two excellent sci-fi stories. If you were out, head to my Handouts page to read the stories. After that, do the assignment in Google Classroom.
2. PLEASE CHARGE YOUR IPADS TONIGHT AND ALL THIS WEEK. Without that computer, you can't take the tests. That doesn't excuse you from the tests! It just means you will have to take them later AND miss your classes which will force you to have homework.

Tuesday, 4/23/24

1. Today everyone took the first part of the math OST. Tomorrow will be the second part. PLEASE CHARGE YOUR IPADS TONIGHT AND ALL THIS WEEK. Without that computer, you can't take the tests. That doesn't excuse you from the tests! It just means you will have to take them later AND miss your classes which will force you to have homework.
2. After the test we read another Bradbury classic - "There Will Come Soft Rains". If you were out today, you don't need to read it. There was no assignment with it and we just read it because it's good.

Wednesday, 4/24/24

1. Today was testing and then we read another great Ray Bradbury short story called "The Veldt". If you were out, head to my handouts page and read it. There will be a 10-question, multiple-guess quiz over it on Friday. It will NOT be open book, so you have to, like, remember stuff. Read closely and carefully!

Thursday, 4/25/24

1. Testing is over! Yay! No work or homework today!

Friday, 4/26/24

1. Today we started class with the quiz on "The Veldt". If you were out, see me when you return so you can make it up. It's only 10 questions so it won't take long to complete.
2. After that, everyone worked on the assignment in Classroom called "The Veldt - David McClean's Analysis". If you were not here today, do that over the weekend. We worked on it in class today and people got pretty darn far with it, which was great. That's due tonight by 11:59 tonight, so make sure you see it through till the end AND SUBMIT IT. It loses points even if it was done on time if you turn it in late. I don't go back and check time stamps, kids; that's too much work that I shouldn't have to do, so I refuse to do it. Be sure to submit the sucker before it's a problem. :-)
3. A few pointers for that assignment - it's to be written in first-person format. You do NOT need to quote or cite from the story or the PDF. Since you were in the house with the Hadleys, we're just going to pretend you had all that knowledge in your head. Remember to be nice in your letter; the Hadleys have it hard enough without the psychologist making them feel worse about what bad parents they are! Lol!
